Introducing the FLM Toolkit

Overview
The Frontline Manager Toolkit provides online access to the information you need to perform your duties as a Frontline Manager.

This Toolkit does not replace or supersede any FAA Orders, Human Resources Policy Manual (HRPM) chapters, or other Agency policies, procedures, and guidance. The Toolkit is a supplemental reference that provides the following:

- Links to the Orders, HRPM chapters, Human Resource Operating Instructions (HROIs), and HRPM Reference Materials and Tools
- Links to job aids and guidelines covering managerial responsibilities, regulations, policies, and procedures
- Definitions of words, terms, and acronyms you may not be familiar with

The information in the Toolkit applies to non-bargaining unit employees/positions and bargaining unit employees/positions, except where the applicable Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) contains conflicting provisions or the subject has not been negotiated.
How to Use the Toolkit

The Toolkit is simply a starting point to help you quickly and easily locate the information you need to complete a task.

The Toolkit Table of Contents lists the various topics associated with managerial tasks and responsibilities. Click the topic you are interested in to display its supporting material.

Links that appear within the text of a Toolkit topic provide access to the FAA website on which the information you need is located. When a destination page is displayed, make sure you scroll the page to investigate its contents. You may find other links that can prove helpful.

Review the list of links in the left panel and also the breadcrumb trail at the top of the page to help you become familiar with your current location. Refer to Saving Search Results to learn how to save information you may want to use again.

Many of the topics described in the Toolkit are available for review online in the Frontline Manager Curriculum (FMC) located on https://elms.faa.gov/. You can view the FMC lessons in any order, at your convenience, and as often as you wish. You will need to use your eLMS user ID and password to login.
Using Search

Use the Toolkit Search feature to locate a topic if it does not appear in the Toolkit Table of Contents.

Remember to also use Search on an FAA page or in a document that is displayed. Press Ctrl+F to display a Search window, if one is not available. You will be prompted to provide criteria for locating a specific topic or term. Using keywords in a Search field to refine your search will also help to narrow the results of a search.

To locate a term, acronym, or label needing further explanation, use one of the following glossaries:

- Appendix A: FAA HRPM Glossary
- Glossary of Federal Sector Labor-Management Relations Terms
- Glossary of Terms Used in Processing Personnel Actions
Saving Search Results

If you find a page or document that contains information you want to save, use the tools displayed at the top of an FAA web page to perform the following tasks:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Use this tool ...</th>
<th>To ...</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Printer Friendly</td>
<td>Set up the current information in a format you can send to your local printer.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Add to My Links</td>
<td>Add a link to the current information in your My Links tab. You will be prompted to sign in using your Web mail username and password to add or edit your links.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

The My Links tab lets you store multiple links to information you want to access quickly. You will need to use your Web mail username and password to login and add to or edit these links. You can also bookmark a site from the FAA browser by adding it to your list of Favorites.

Website addresses are subject to change. If a website is not accessible, go to the FAA Home page and use the Search field to locate your topic.
Quick Links

If you are a self-starter and like to find your own way, the following sections describe the websites you can use to start your own searches.

You may also want to review the Manager's Guide to Human Resource Management. This reference contains a descriptive Fact Sheet for each of several FAA programs and procedures and may provide additional terms and categories for you to use as search criteria.
Using FAA Policy and Guidance

The FAA Policy and Guidance web page contains a variety of links displayed by subject and policy type. From the FAA’s Policy and Guidance page (Figure 1) you can do one of the following:

- Click a link to review its associated information. This is a high-level view and may require drilling down into the various categories to find what you are looking for.

- Enter keywords in the Search field to locate a specific topic or document.

When you select the Search field (Figure 2), a list appears identifying the areas that will be searched to locate your topic. To minimize the search results, deselect one or more checkboxes.
For example, if you search for emergency planning topics in the HRPM only, the results will resemble Figure 3.

Note that the search results indicate what was searched for and where it was found, in addition to providing links to sites that mention the topic.

Using the Manager Toolbox

Click Manager Toolbox to view a list of topics that specifically address the needs of supervisors and managers, such as policies, references, guidance handbooks, and templates (Figure 4).

This is another high-level view that requires some drilling down to find what you are looking for.
Using FAA Tools & Resources

Refer to the Tools & Resources web page for quick links to various topics of interest.

If the topic you are seeking is not listed, click More>> to display links to additional topics.
Human Resources Policy Manual

Overview
The Human Resources Policy Manual (HRPM) contains links to the policies and procedures that guide and support the management of FAA personnel. The information in the HRPM is typically used in conjunction with the FAA Personnel Management System (PMS).

The Introduction to the HRPM is a brief overview of the HRPM, what it is and how its contents are organized.

If you need additional assistance completing a task, contact your manager or your servicing Human Resources representative.
HRPM Table of Contents

The HRPM Table of Contents (TOC) provides links to the contents of the manual by volume name, number, and topic. In addition, it provides links to Policy Bulletins, HROIs, and reference materials.

The TOC is available from the FAA employees’ Home page. You can enter HRPM in the Search field to display the link to the HRPM TOC (Figure 5).

Click a volume name to display its chapters.

Appendix A: HRPM Glossary
To display the terms and acronyms used in the HRPM, go to the Glossary.

Appendix B: HRPM Topical Index

Leadership

Overview

As the FAA rapidly adapts to the changing dynamics of the operating environment, the organization recognizes the critical importance of strong leaders to support that dynamic environment. As an organization with a history of strong technical background, the FAA realizes the need for an integrated leadership philosophy to guide leaders to have a greater focus on leadership rather than the tasks associated with management.

Leaders are people characterized by loyalty, duty, respect, service, honor, integrity, and professionalism (LDRSHP). They are committed to building enduring organizations. They have a deep sense of purpose and are true to the FAA core values of safety, excellence, integrity, innovation, and people. They recognize the importance of feedback, accountability, and agility (adaptability).

They understand those they are entrusted to lead and effectively differentiate the type of leadership needed to have the best effect on achieving the desired performance. They have the courage to build the Agency to meet the needs of all of their stakeholders and they recognize the importance of their service to the public.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ and locate the In Pursuit of Leadership course. You will need to use your user ID and password to log into eLMS.

For a detailed description of the components of the Managerial Success Profile (MSP), go to https://employees.faa.gov/org/staffoffices/ahr/program_policies/policy_guidance/hr_policies/hrpm/wp/wp_ref/profile/.
Leadership Focus
The FAA Leadership Philosophy envisions leaders actively and consciously strive to be adaptive, values-based, and principle-centered; demonstrating several principles when conducting their duties including:

- actively seeking feedback,
- maintaining accountability,
- adapting to complex and rapidly evolving situations,
- displaying loyalty to the people they lead and follow,
- fostering a high sense of duty,
- treating others with respect,
- dedicating themselves to service, honoring commitments, and
- modeling professionalism.

Ultimately creating a culture which embraces and executes the FAA’s core values:

- Character and competence at the personal level reflected in ongoing professional development.
- Competence at the interpersonal level reflected in building relationships of trust with employees and colleagues.
- Respect and service reflected in working well with others and developing a service orientation.
- Alignment of teams, strategy, and systems with Agency goals to promote organizational awareness.
Leadership Approaches

The three leadership approaches that support the FAA Leadership Philosophy include adaptive, values-based, and principle-centered leadership.

Adaptive leadership focuses on the way the leader deals with change and problem-solving. They have the ability to identify challenges as either technical or adaptive. Technical challenges can be addressed with known solutions using the current organizational structures and procedures. Adaptive challenges require significant (and often painful) shifts in people’s way of thinking and/or working.

Most managers come up through organizational ranks primarily on the strength of their professional or technical knowledge. Their strong suit is tackling technical challenges and solving them through analysis, logic, and experience. This default response pattern will not work nearly as well on adaptive challenges.

The adaptive leader must be acutely aware of what is going inside him/her. Adaptive leaders are courageous leaders. And much needed in this increasingly complex world.

Values-based leadership is the idea that leaders should draw on their and their followers’ values for direction, inspiration, and motivation. Values in this context means: "Principles or standards of behavior; one's judgment of what is important in life." Values-based leadership philosophy asserts that people are mostly motivated by values; people care deeply about their personal values, and live according to these values. In other words, values are our most natural motivator.

There are four principles of values-based leadership.

- The first is to be self-reflective. You must have the ability to identify and reflect on what you stand for, what your values are, and what matters most to you.

- The second principle is balance which means the ability to see situations from multiple perspectives and differing viewpoints to gain a much fuller understanding.

- The third principle is true self-confidence, accepting yourself as you are.

- The fourth principle is genuine humility. Never forget who you are or where you came from.

Principle-centered leaders are people of character who work on the basis of natural principles and build those principles into the center of their lives, into the center of their relationships with others, into the center of their agreements and contracts, into their management processes, and into their mission statements.

Principles-centered leadership is practiced from the inside out on four levels:

1. Personal: your relationships with yourself
2. Interpersonal: your relationships and interactions with others
3. Managerial: your responsibility to get a job done with others
4. Organizational: your need to organize people - to recruit them, train them, compensate them, build teams, solve problems, and create aligned structure, strategy, and systems
Determining Your Leadership Role

Questions to ask yourself regarding your leadership:

- How can I, as a leader, improve my leadership approach to maximize employee commitment and contribution to organizational quality?
- Great leadership demands the pursuit of continuous improvement. What are you in pursuit of NOW?
- How can I ensure that employees are supported in their endeavor to continuously increase their learning and expand their competence?
- In my leadership role, what measures can I take to make ‘service’ a constant in employees’ day to day performance of duties?
- What ways do I demonstrate my own positive energy and instill this energy in employees?
- What means do I use to consistently send a message of ‘trust and support’ towards employees?
- What steps do I take to explore employees’ “unknown” potential?
- What systems are in place to help employees’ work/life balance? How do I show my support for work/life balance?
- What do I do to ‘renew myself’ physically; mentally (exercise the mind); and emotionally (develop patience)
- How do I ensure employees have a clear picture and commitment to the FAA’s mission, vision, principles and values? In what ways do I consciously apply these at work?
- In what ways do I involve employees in the decision-making process to indicate a ‘trusting spirit’?
- How do I communicate a ‘picture of the future’ to employees? How do I instill a genuine commitment to a shared picture of the future in employees?
- What part can I play in showing my commitment to Equal Employment Opportunity and reasonable accommodation principles? In what ways can I involve employees to further develop their compassion and sense of fairness?
- What action have I taken to develop or improve my sense of fairness in treating all employees equitably and impartially?
Managerial Workforce Planning

Overview

Managerial Workforce Planning (MWP) is an integrated system for selecting, training, and managing the performance of FAA managers. MWP contains the requirements and guidance for recruiting, selecting, developing, and assessing the performance of FAA managers based on the Managerial Success Profile.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson, Managerial Workforce Planning. You will need to use your eLMS user ID and password to login.
HRPM Workforce Planning Policies

To review HRPM Workforce Planning policies, perform the following steps:

1. Click HRPM Table of Contents.

2. In the list of contents, click HRPM Volume 10: Workforce Planning. The link to contents of Volume 10 are displayed (Figure 9), in addition to associated HROIs and reference materials.

3. Click the name of a topic to display its associated information.

From the FAA employees’ Home page, you can enter HRPM in the Search field to display the link to the HRPM TOC.

Managerial Success Profile

Overview

The Managerial Success Profile (MSP) is the FAA’s corporate managerial competency model.

The MSP consists of four dimensions: Achieving Results, Leading People, Building Relationships, and Leading Change. Each of the dimensions includes several competencies all managers must strive for to become successful.

Managerial Probationary Period

Employees permanently appointed to managerial positions for the first time are required to serve a 1-year probationary period. Employees appointed to managerial positions as new hires will serve their new hire and managerial probationary periods concurrently.

Closing Out the Managerial Probationary Period

The supervising manager of the probationer is responsible for completing the Probationary Period Checklist as a record of the decision that the probationary period was or was not completed successfully. Refer to HROI – Closing out the FAA Managerial Probationary Period to learn how to complete this procedure.

If the probation was not completed successfully, refer to one or more of the following sites to review this procedure:

- EMP-1.5, FAA Managerial Probationary Period
- ER-4.7, Termination during Managerial Probationary Period
- HROI- Procedures for Termination During the Managerial Probationary Period
- Sample Memo – Termination during Managerial Probationary Period
FAA Performance Management System

Overview

The FAA Performance Management System (PMS) is a year-long process designed to monitor and improve the individual employee’s performance through a series of meetings involving planning, feedback, and coaching. The purpose of PMS is to help the Agency Lines of Business and staff offices meet their goals and objectives.

PMS plans can be created using AHR forms or the PMS software tool. In addition, your employees’ performance plans must be developed with a direct 'line of sight' to the FAA Flight Plan.

The PMS applies to all non-bargaining unit employees, managers, and those bargaining unit employees where the PMS has been negotiated.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the following Performance Management System lessons. You will need to use your eLMS user ID and password to login.

Leave Schedules

Overview

Because Frontline Managers are authorized to approve leave, they are responsible for proper administration of leave provisions. You need to be familiar with various types of leave as they often have very specific rules and guidelines. If you need assistance, contact your manager or your servicing Human Resources representative.

This section describes how to locate FAA-defined types of absence and leave and their administration. Review the Work Schedules section in this Toolkit for additional information related to managing leave.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson, Managing Leave. You will need to use your eLMS user ID and password to login.

Work Schedules

Overview

As a frontline manager, you are responsible for scheduling work to ensure that the mission and function of the organization are carried out effectively and efficiently. There are several traditional and non-traditional work schedules that you will encounter as an FAA manager. Some work situations or CBAs may limit the available options. It is vital that you understand the related policy and requirements for the schedules you manage.

Review the HRPM Leave Policy section in this Toolkit for additional information on employee work schedule policy.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson, Time and Attendance. You will need to use your eLMS user ID and password to login.

Labor-Management Relations

Overview

All FAA managers who have employees covered by the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute (the Statute) are responsible for creating and maintaining effective labor-management relations.

The Statute is administered by the Federal Labor Relations Authority (FLRA) which oversees the labor relations program for unions representing federal employees and their employing agencies.

This section provides links to Federal legislation and FAA policy and guidelines for Labor-Management Relations (LMR). However, it does not answer all questions or issues that may arise as you pursue your managerial responsibilities. Contact your servicing Employee and Labor Management professional if you need additional help.

The Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute

The Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute (the Statute) prescribes the LMR rights and obligations of agencies and labor organizations in the Federal service. The Statute also establishes procedures designed to meet the special requirement and needs of the Federal Government.

As a Frontline Manager, you should have an understanding of the important provisions of the Statute. Use the following links to review the provisions of the Statute.

Federal Labor Relations Authority (FLRA)

The FLRA is an independent agency of the Executive Branch of the Federal Government which administers the labor relations program to ensure that the rights provided to employees and agencies by the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute are properly interpreted and administered.

The FLRA’s responsibilities include the following:

• Resolving complaints of unfair labor practices (ULPs)
• Determining the appropriateness of units for labor organization representation
• Adjudicating exceptions to arbitrator’s awards
• Adjudicating legal issues relating to the duty to bargain
• Resolving impasses during negotiations

NOTE: The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS) is not part of the FLRA. It is an independent entity that provides services to both the private and public sectors. It provides mediation to impasse situations but does not issue binding resolutions.
FAA Employee and Labor Management Relations

FAA’s AHR provides professional guidance and support through the following Labor Relations groups:

- Third-Party Services (AHL-200)
- Collective Bargaining Services (AHL-300)
- National LR Systems and Programs (AHL-400)

The Labor Relations Fact Sheet describes the types of assistance available from these groups and their specific responsibilities.

To view additional resources, visit the FAA Labor Relations website.
Bargaining Obligations

As managers, you will make decisions daily. These decisions cover a wide range of subjects, many of which relate to operational matters. Other decisions relate to working conditions.

When a decision relates to working conditions, management is obligated to negotiate the decision with the exclusive representative of the bargaining unit—the union representative.

Section 7106 of the Statute establishes the following three main categories of bargaining.

Section 7106(a): Prohibited Subjects
Subjects prohibited from bargaining are the mission, the budget, organizational structure, and security, except when implementation or impact make these items an issue.

Section 7106(b)(1): Permissive Subjects
Subjects permitted for bargaining are staffing, method and means of performing work, and technology. Staffing specifically refers to the number of employees assigned to an organizational sub-division. Management determines if they are going to negotiate these subjects or limit negotiations to any implementation and impact issues.

Section 7106(b)(2) and (3): Mandatory Subjects
Mandatory subjects of bargaining include procedures and arrangements (also known as impact and implementation or I&I). Also included are conditions of employment. You must negotiate these issues. Remember, conditions of employment are not about operational policies or procedures.
Meeting with Bargaining Unit Employees

As a manager, you need to know when unions have the right to be present during meetings between the Agency and bargaining unit employees.

Most discussions will not include the obligation to involve union representatives. However, in two specific meetings between agency representatives and bargaining unit employees, the union has the right to be present. These meetings include:

- Formal discussions
- Investigative (or Weingarten) meetings

Refer to the Guide to Labor Relations for a detailed description of these meetings.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson, Introduction to Labor Management Relations: Types of Meetings. You will need to use your eLMS user ID and password to login.

Contact your servicing Employee and Labor Management professional if you need additional help.
Formal Discussions

According to the Statute Section 7114(a)(2)(A), in a formal discussion management must give the union the opportunity to attend.

A formal discussion is synonymous with meeting in this context. A meeting where someone makes a statement or announces personnel policy, even though no discussion takes place, is technically a formal meeting.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson, Introduction to Labor Management Relations: Types of Meetings. You will need to use your eLMS user ID and password to login.

Review the criteria for a formal meeting in the Guide to Labor Relations.

Contact your servicing Employee and Labor Management professional if you need additional help identifying a formal discussion.
Investigative (or Weingarten) Meetings

When management is involved in examining an employee in connection with an investigation, management needs to be aware of potential Weingarten issues. Based on the Weingarten case, which was tried before the U.S. Supreme Court, employees are entitled to the help of a union representative if they request such assistance.

The Weingarten rights are codified in the Statute Section 7114(a)(2)(B).

Review the criteria for identifying a Weingarten meeting in the Guide to Labor Relations. To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson, Introduction to Labor Management Relations: Types of Meetings. You will need to use your eLMS user ID and password to login.

Contact your servicing Employee and Labor Management professional if you need additional help identifying an investigative meeting.
Information Requests

Section 7114(b)4 of the Statute provides for agencies to furnish labor organizations with data or information related to collective bargaining.

While the FAA recognizes the obligation to provide such information, there are a number of legitimate reasons for denying information, including protecting the privacy interests of individuals.

Review the criteria for providing data or information in the Guide to Labor Relations. Additionally, review the FAQs concerning information requests posted on the FLRA web site.

Contact your servicing Employee and Labor Management professional if you need additional help identifying information requests and the need to provide it.
Unfair Labor Practices

An Unfair Labor Practice (ULP) is an allegation of the violation of the Statute itself and can be filed against an agency or a labor organization—but never against an individual employee. Even though you may be designated the management official directly involved and actually named in the charge, the ULP charge is against the agency, not against you as an individual.

When your facility or office receives an official ULP from the FLRA, you should immediately send all the original correspondence to your Employee and Labor Management Relations professional. It is not the responsibility of the Frontline Manager or facility/office manager to respond to the charge.

Section 7116 of the Statute lists the possible ULPs that both labor and management may commit. Many are the same for both labor and management. The most common ULP filed against management is failure to negotiate in good faith.
Reasonable Accommodation

Overview
Reasonable accommodation refers to any changes or adjustments in the work environment, in the application process, or in a benefit or privilege of employment for a reason related to physical or mental impairment. For example, making existing facilities readily accessible to and usable by employees; job restructuring; proving qualified readers or interpreters.

The decision-maker for FAA employees who request reasonable accommodation is the individual’s frontline manager. Management is ultimately responsible for receiving, processing, and granting or denying reasonable accommodation requests through an interactive process and in a timely manner.

The decision-maker may need to consult with the appropriate HR, Legal, Civil Rights Offices, Disabilities Program Manager, and/or the Disability Resources Center when making a decision. You may also want to review the purpose of the Accountability Board.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson, EEO: Understanding Reasonable Accommodation. You will need to use your eLMS User ID and password to login.

Equal Employment Opportunity

Overview
The FAA is committed to being a Model Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) employer in compliance with all anti-discrimination laws, regulations, and policies. All managers and supervisors are required to demonstrate commitment to EEO policies.

The Agency has zero tolerance for harassment and for discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, national origin, age, disability, or reprisal for participating in protected EEO activity.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the following Equal Employment Opportunity lessons. You will need to use your eLMS User ID and password to login.

Accountability Board

Overview

As a manager, you are responsible for creating a workplace free from harassment and intimidation. You must also ensure that all employees in your organization are familiar with how the Accountability Board functions.

The Board oversees management’s response to allegations or incidents of harassment or other misconduct that creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment, and outlines the procedures to ensure consistent and timely handling of such allegations.

To report allegations of harassment, go to the Accountability Board Home page.

The procedures for reporting, investigating, and processing such allegations are prescribed by Order 1110.125a, Accountability Board, June 2002.

Employment Procedures

Overview

FAA personnel are critical to the success of the Agency. Their goals as an employee are to satisfy future mission requirements and support the Agency goals of safety, security, and efficiency. Within this framework, managers need to be familiar with the employment process and understand the criticality of seeking qualified personnel.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson: Employment Issues. You will need to use your eLMS User ID and password to login.

Links to additional policy and guidance for managing the probationary period appear at the bottom of each web page.

Employee Development

Refer to the ESC Career Development and Job Enhancement Guide for guidelines to help you assist employees in career development and job enhancement techniques, in addition to preparation of their Individual Development Plan (IDP).

To review restrictions on funding for employee training, refer to Public Law 105-277.

Separation

Personnel who leave FAA for other employment opportunity or retirement must follow existing exit procedures. As a manager, you need to be familiar with these procedures and ensure that they have been followed.

Review Employee Exiting Information for an overview of the separation process.
Time and Attendance

Overview
Proper tracking and reporting of time and attendance is a vital frontline manager responsibility. For a description of how the FAA handles this task, click Labor Distribution Reporting (LDR).

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson, Time and Attendance. You will need to use your eLMS User ID and password to login.

Pay and Compensation

Overview

As a frontline manager, you will need to be familiar with pay plans and tables, premium pay and compensatory time, and annual pay adjustments. However, you do not need detailed knowledge of the complexities of pay policies and your employees’ entitlements.

Core Compensation (Core Comp) is the FAA’s pay system. You should know how Core Comp works to be able to properly compensate your employees and recognize their superior performance. Core Comp covers all non-bargaining unit FAA employees and bargaining unit employees where required bargaining has been completed.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson, FAA Core Comp Pay and Compensation. You will need to use your eLMS User ID and password to login.

Use the Pay page to review online payroll tools, calendars, plans, and tables. You may also want to review the information in the Time and Attendance section of this Toolkit.

Remember to review your labor agreement (CBA) to see if it contains pay information specific to your employees’ bargaining unit.

If you need assistance, contact your manager or your servicing Human Resources representative. Make sure you provide HR all the information they need to evaluate and resolve the matter.

A Table of Contents is provided with links to rules and regulations on premium pay for overtime, night, Sunday and holiday work, hazard pay, allowances and differentials in addition to many other topics covering pay administration.

Job Documentation

Job documentation describes and differentiates between levels of work. The following links provide details related to the Job Documentation System:

- Job Series Definitions
- Career Level Definitions

This system is the basis for paying employees in the Core Compensation Plan. Managers of organizations covered by CoreComp use Job Documentation to assign series, job categories, and career levels to positions.

Position descriptions under the CoreComp Plan are replaced with the series definition, the job category definition, and the selected career level definitions. If you need assistance, contact your servicing Human Resources representative.
Annual Pay Changes

Refer to HRPM Comp 2.4c: Annual Changes in the Core Compensation Plan to learn about performance-based pay increases, including levels of increase, computing increases, and eligibility.
Occupational Safety and Health

Overview

The Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) was passed in 1970 and amended in 2004. The purpose of the Act is to ensure safe and healthful working conditions for all working men and women, and assists and encourages every state in the U.S. to do the same.

OSHA also provides research, information, education, and training in the field of occupational safety and health. The OSHA guidelines are integrated into the FAA day-to-day operations at all levels. See Occupational Safety & Health for a list of FAA programs, training, and initiatives for OSHA.

To review the Frontline Manager Curriculum for this topic, such as job aids and resources, go to https://elms.faa.gov/ to access the lesson, Occupational Safety and Health. You will need to use your eLMS User ID and password to login.
Manager Responsibilities

When a mishap occurs, managers are typically one of the first to hear about it. You also know the types of work your employees do and the environment they work in. Thus you are familiar with the operations and processes that affect your employees and you know the hazards associated with their workplace.

You must report injuries and illnesses according to the criteria in FAA Order 3900.19b using the Safety Management Information System (SMIS) website. SMIS requires that you log on with your user ID and password. The report will be automatically forwarded to the local OSH Manager in the location where the mishap occurred, where a thorough investigation will be performed.
OSHA Laws and Regulations

The following list identifies the Federal laws and regulations associated with OSHA:

- The Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, Public Law 91-596
- Executive Order 12196, Occupational Safety and Health Programs for Federal Employees
- 29 Code of Federal Regulations Part 1960, Basic Program Elements for Federal Occupational Safety and Health Programs
FAA OSHA Policies

FAA Order 3900.19B, Occupational Safety and Health Program, Updated August 26, 2008, establishes policy framework and assigns responsibility for an effective agency-wide employee safety and health program.

Executive Order 13513, Federal Leadership on Reducing Text Message While Driving establishes policy to prohibit the use of text messaging while driving on official business or while using Government-supplied equipment thus improving safety on roads and highways.

DOT Order 3902.10, Text Messaging while Driving, reiterates the requirements of EO 13513 to establish a mandatory ban on text messaging while driving and appropriate disciplinary action for violation of the order.
